The Work

Barbara S. Morrison

Behind a mirror,
on the cushion -
among rocks that grow in the garden.

Clarity speaks.
Sprouts curl in circles.
Pale green tendrils
are for seeing.

Climbing walls
inclining toward
nets whose junctions
travel canyons.

These tendrils grab,
holding onto contours
such as those that we have spoken.